AMERICAN
YOUTH FILM FESTIVAL

The American Youth Festival Group has announced the 2015 American Youth Film Festival. From June 12th until the 13th the organization will be celebrating its "official launch" in Columbus, Georgia. The event will be held at The Center for International Education at Columbus State University. The theme is, "Lights. Camera. Action! – For the Love of Film!" The American Youth Film Festival is an opportunity for youth to showcase their creativity in cinematography by presenting original films produced by, written by, or starring them and/or family or friends. Participants submitted projects produced on cell phones, digital cameras, or advanced recording equipment.

The ability for young people to conceptualize, plan, and create their own independent films, facilitated by such modern media as YouTube and Vine, allows each film maker to freely express the subjects that interest them. The American Youth Film Festival provides a platform on which these young cinematographers can develop their talents and gain valuable experience in managing projects and actualizing their vision. The American Youth Film Festival captures the interest that exists in the creation and sharing of original, independent content and channels it to understand the "love of film or filmmaking" through the eyes of young filmmakers to tell their story—all for the love of film!
